

The Flower Alphabet Book
by Jerry Pallotta, Leslie Evans

This delightful book featuring 26 large colorful renditions of flowers, both popular and obscure is a delight to the eye as well as full of helpful information and suggestions about each featured flower.

From the tiniest babe in arms to great great grandmother in the nursing home and everyone in between this book will brightened the day.

At my house our copy stays on the sun porch for all to enjoy. For whatever reason, my granddaughters always dissolve in laughter as now they read to me “K is for Kangaroo Paw. These flowers resemble the hands of kangaroos. Some other flowers with silly names are Lion's Ear, Goat's Beard, Elephant Heads, and Pig-squeak.” Marigold's health benefits to chickens who eat them, as well as tidbits such as fact that Lilac's sometimes make people sneeze are among the many gems of information in this fun fact filled alphabet book. The artist's note page at the end gives a little more information about the featured flowers.

The Flower Alphabet Book is available from book stores and Amazon as well as from the publisher www.Charlesbridge.com .
